

iOmegaT

Translation Productivity Test-Bench

'iOmegaT' is a translation productivity measurement tool that enables you to save money and improve productivity in the translation supply chain.

Market context

The demand for translation services is steadily growing. In 2013, Common Sense Advisory observed that the US$35 billion language services market is expanding at an annual rate of 5.13%. In response to this growth, the use of machine translation (MT) is becoming more widespread, and, in turn, this has resulted in increased demand for tools to adequately assess the productivity and the overall efficiency of machine translation

iOmegaT overview

The iOmegaT Translation Productivity Test-Bench is a suite of language tools that gathers translator activity data and calculates the effect of MT on translator speed.

iOmegaT collects and integrates data from OmegaT, which is a free, open-source CAT tool used by many professional translators. This automated approach to collecting productivity data is a 'game changer' in current industry reporting practices, bringing a new dimension to business intelligence and data analysis, and ultimately enhancing MT quality and translator productivity iOmegaT is a translation productivity measurement tool that is suitable for any language service provider wishing to understand and improve translation productivity and delivery.

Applications

- Translation Productivity Insights: Provides businesses with detailed insights into key performance indicators for machine translation productivity and success within the translation supply chain.
- Pricing Strategy: Guides translation price negotiations for all translation projects.
- Human Resources: Identifies talented post-editors and provides valuable information for assigning the right person for each job.

Technology Status

iOmegaT is available to license

Technology Sector
Digital Platforms, Content and Applications

Opportunity
Available to License

Researcher(s)
John Moran and Dave Lewis

Contact
John Whelan
Case Manager
John.WheLAN@tcd.ie
+353 1 896 8517